Washington, January 16 .- [Special Corres pondence.]-Never before since the Buchanan administration have there been so many southern people in Washington as there are now.

A large number of congressmen have their families with them. Southern people of means in considerable numbers are spending the winter at the capital. Some of them have revived to some extent the style in which southern families lived here before the war, though most of them live in a plain elegance. contrasting strongly with the dash and splendor of the plantation lords in ante-bellum days. This increasing number of southern people at the capital every winter is indicative at once of the growing prosperity of that section and the now almost perfectly restored feeling that Washington is as much their capital as anybody's.

THE PATENTS ISSUED.

Recently the following patents have been granted to Georgia citizens: J. S. Purley, At-lanta, corn sheller; J. H. Randall, Aeworth, spring gun; William McNaught, Jr., Carters-ville, side-saddle girth. In the year 1880 there were issued to Geor-

MILWAUKEE, January I7.—George William Clason, who, as a journeyman printer, set the type and read the proof for the first book of poems published by William Cuilen Bryant, died at his home in this city this morning, aged nearly minety years. Mr. Clason was a native of New York, and has been a journalist all his life until the past few years. He married a sister or a cousin of John I. Blair, the New Jersey ruliroad magnate. Clason was a democrat of the old school, and published the Dayton, Ohio, Daily Empire until the breaking out of the war, when he sold to Vallandigham. He came to this city and published the Dairy News for many years. The past few years his mind has been impaired, and he has been a great sufferer.

Mr. Beck Attacks the Gigantic Swindle-The Sher-man Refunding Bill-Mr. Orth's Failure to Revolutionize the House Committees— Discussing the Appropriations.

Mr. Davis, of West Virginia, from the committee on appropriations, reported, with amendments, a bill to repeal certain laws relating to permanent and indefinite appropriation

A bill was introduced by Mr. Davis, of Illinois, to permit Ward Hunt, associate jus ice of the supreme court of the United States, to retire, and Mr. Blair, granting a pension to Lucretria R. Garfield.

During the morning hour Mr. Beck resumed his remarks upon Mr. Ingalls's resolution declaring the pension arrears law ought not to be replealed. At the conclusion of Mr. Beck's remarks, Mr. Ingalls said that as the funding bill had the precedence to-day, he would defer a formal reply to Mr. Beck to a more convenient time. The subject was accordingly passed over for the present.

At 1:20 the consideration of the Sherman funding bill was resumed. The bill was discussed by Messrs. Plumb, Pugh, Teller, Saunders and Pendleton.

Mr. Plumb argued that the redemption fund for United States notes ought to be diminished. He urged the solemn duty of congress not only to cut down, but to definitely limit that fund at a stated figure, thereby making a saving to the country in the item of interest, while allowing the money heretofore hoarded in the treasury to circulate. He believed that the reduction of the fund to $50,000,000 could safely be made. To make his proposition wholly conservative he had fixed the limit at $100,000,000, so as to make full and ample provision for the redemption of every government obligation. He advo-cated the redemption of the 3½ per cents of surplus revenue over and above $100,000,000, and that this ought not to be reduced except in the redemption of United States notes. Mr. Pugh said that Mr. Vest's amendment, being a copy of the Carlisle amendment, while applicable to the funding bill of the ast congress, was inoperative and inconsistent with some provisions of the pending bill He suggested some modifications making it applicable. He favored that amendment upon consideration, among others, that the failure of the government to force the banks to take ew 3 per cents would amount to the discredit of the banks who, in the language from the senator from Arkansas, (Mr. Garland) were a mere fiscal agent of the government. And further, if not compelled to take new bonds the interest of the banks would induce their aid in preventing the establishment of 3 percent as the normal interest rate. He was not per cent as the normal interest rate. He was not convinced of the necessity of refunding under the present conditions, nor is the government under any compulsion to pay five million dollars in interest as proposed. Reviewing the operations of the banking system, and criticising as an impolitic power of the banks to contract the currency. Mr. Pugh went on to say that the opposite extremes of inflation and contraction of currency represented by the greenback and republican parties respectively were excesses to be avoided, and that the democratic party stood between these two exdemocratic party stood between these two ex-tremes and would keep the country on the ground of safety and here was the irrepressi-ble conflict between the two extremes and it was the duty of congress to restrain both.

In general, I am satisfied with the law as propounded by your honor, but I have suggested still broader views which I ask your honor to follow, to-wit: That if the jury believed that I believed it was right to remove the president because I had special divine authority so to do, and was forced to do it by the Deity, they will acquiton the grounds of transitory mania. Sickles, McFarland and Hiscock were acquitted on the ground of transitory mania. In my speech published in all the leading American papers, yesterday, and which I presume your honor has read, I gave my reasons for asking your honor so to charge. Mr. Reid made a brilliant and lawver-like plea for the defense, and Mr. Scoville is making a strong argument for this theory; but neither Mr. Reed nor Mr. Sgot ville represent me in this defense, I am here as my own coursel, and, as stated at the opening of the case, no one can represent me to that jury. Mr. Scoville began with a general complaint of legal unfairness on the part of the prosecution, particularly of the prosecution, particularly of the prosecution, particularly of the prosecution. He had from the beginning prescribed who should visit the jail and who should not. He had introduced persons into the prisoner's cell under false guise to worm out his secrets, and when the prisoner said anything which and when the prisoner said anything which might inure to his benefit the prosecuting attorney had been very careful not to let it be known. He complained of Mr. Corkhill's unfairness in destroying the notes of Steno-grapher Bailey so that the defense could not

Mr. Scoville said the conduct of the prose cution was not only unfair to the defense, but often discourteous, and more befitting a po-lice court than this case. He then gave his views of Judge Porter, and instructed the jury how much weight they should attach to this utterance. Mr. Scoville commenced a re-view of the life of the prisoner and continued away, is the aim and occupation of perhaps 10,000 persons depending on this apparently very humble, but in reality highly lucrative business for a livelihood. There are no less than 200 junk shops (wholesale and retail) in New York;

there are 1,100 licensed junkmen who go out with carts every day to collect the refuse from door to door, and the number of unlicensed ragpickers is estimated by officers of the license bureau at 1,000 at the very lowest. Some of the junk shops employ from fifty to eighty persons in collecting, weighing, sorting and packing the stuff, and considering the number of families whose bread-winners are engaged in the industry it is regarded by those most competent to judge as a moderate estimate that about ten thousand people are dependent upon it. The whole business is as systematized as the United States treasury or the British civil service. Every possible description of pasteboard, rag, bottle, waste paper or piece of old metal has its fixed price, and in a famous junk shop of this city no less than seventeen grades of wares of different prices (varying by perhaps only one-eighth of 1 cent per pound) were counted by the foreman. There is, for instance-to speak of paper stock-"No. 1 white," which means trimmings and clippings of white paper made from rags, mostly obtained from book-bind

The weighers employed at the junk ware. The weighers employed at the junk shops, by force of experience, will instantly recognize the quality and call out at once to the cashier whether it is "1-cent" or "2-cent stuff," or what it is worth, and while the junkman or ragpicker may occasionally drive a specially hard bargain and quibble about The junk dealer's response, "the elevated railroads sell their tickets regularly after they have sell their tickets regularly after they have been taken out of the boxes into which the passengers throw them before entering the cars. man," living in comfortable houses and comparative luxury, while others, carrying on an extended business, involving large capital, vegetate in the utmost wretchedness.

There is a queer Irishman, Comiskey by name, who lives in a shanty in Seventy-second street, between Tenth and Eleventh avenues, and has four or five boys going about collecting refuge. He buys old horses at from $2 to $5 apiece, which he harnesses to his carts, and keeps pigs and calves besides, which he feeds on potato peelings, cabbage, old meal, etc., and sells at a handsome profit. That man makes junk-picking pay, though he no longer goes out himself, but leaves the disagreeable work to his boys.

Quite a romantic chapter, and one full of

MYSTERIES OF JUNK.

GLIMPSES INTO A WONDERFUL BUSINESS.

How the Waste of a Great City is Utilized—The Extraordinary "Finds" Made by the Junk Dealers—Curiosities and Oddities of the Junk Shop.

New York, January 10.—In a highly complex civilization like that of New York it is not to be wondered at if the waste of this great city has given rise to one of its most marvelous industries. How to utilize every scrap of refuse, every piece of worn out twine andrope, every pair of old boots, every sheet of moldy paper that may be thrown away, is the aim and occupation of perhaps the most extraordinary incident is opened by an anternpt to describe the lucky "finds" made in refuse heaps by junk dealers and their employes. Perhaps the most remarkable of these was the discovery of the secret correspondence relating to the matriage between Jerome Benaparte and Miss Paterson, of Baltimore, and the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson family and Napoleon, and of their failure, was collated and the result published in 1873 in a book. A firm of junk dealers had purchased their employes. Perhaps the most remarkable of these was the discovery of the secret correspondence relating to the matriage between Jerome Benaparte and Miss Paterson, of Baltimore, and the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the old warehouse of the bride's father. From the letters found in this strange manner the entire his tory of these negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations between the Paterson families, in the waste paper of the subsequent negotiations be among the waste paper. Thus the waste paper stock of an old warehouse has actually been made to serve for the purposes of contemporaneous literature. The junk dealers tell of other extraordinary "finds." A Maiden Lane jeweler gave up a diamond ring whick was sent to him by express as lost, when lo months afterward the man to whom he sold his waste paper stock and other refuse found it in the heap and returned it to him. Mr. Murdock, the superintendent of Stockwell's establishment, exhibits a letter from the jeweler, expressing his thanks for the return of the diamong ring. Another instance, perhaps equally remarkable, was the discovery of indorsed checks to the amount of $3,000, found among the waste paper of a well known city bank. It appeared upon investigation that the owner was not aware of his loss, and had, therefore, taken no measures to stop the checks, so that they would have been paid on presentation. To return to the smaller and every day losses of this character, the junk dealers very frequently find penknives, postern dealers very frequently find penknives, post-age stamps, scissors—but money, they all agree, very rarely. It would thus appear that while people are reckless with letters, chēcks, rings and other articles of value the hard cash is about the only thing which they will take good care not to drop into their waste paper baskets.

The women who sort the stuff in the junk shops and who are quite a numerous class in the city—they are called "sorters"—all understand that these articles belong to the perquisites of the foreman or superintendent of quisites of the foreman or superintendent of the shop. "Them's my pickings," a foreman up town said, and he added with great gusto that the autographs of well-known personages often found in heapsof mouldy letters formed a very pleasant addition to his wages. He had studied up the subject of autographs thoroughly, and knew their commercial value, both here and abroad, to a penny. He could tell off-hand what the autograph in a letter of Washing on or Jefferson or Gen. Jackson or any public man would fetch in the open market, just as he could tell whether a bundle of old paper brought to him was worth 1½ cents. Ret, just as he could tell whether a bundle of old paper brought to him was worth 1½ cents, or 1½ cents per pound. In visiting a junkshop, the writer was not a little surprised to see some torn "L" railroad tickets on the floor. He picked them up and said: "Surely you don't buy these?" "Certainly," was the junk dealer's response, "the elevated railroads sell their tickets regularly after they have

The Arraignment of the Prisoners Before the Jury, CATLETTSBURG, Ky., January 17. - The ourt convened at 9 o'clock this morning. Judge McGinnis, of West Virginia, is on the bench with Judge Brown. Prisoner Neal on entering the court room appeared as collected as usual. The work of empanneling the jury was concluded, and the jury was sworn. Some excitement was created by the introduction into the court room of a crowbar and ax, the weapons used to kill Miss Thomas. Neal pleaded not guilty and the court adjourned till 1 p. m.

Neal pleaded not guilty and the court adjourned till 1 p. m.
Standing room could not be obtained in the court house this afternoon. Fifty-three witnesses were sworn for the prosecution and de-

George Ellis was placed on the stand at 2 o'clock and was questioned by Judge Ireland. He reiterated his confession to the jury. His story was remarkably straight, and in the cross-examination the witness did not deviate from his stories heretofore. Neal, the prisoner, fastened a vicious stare on Ellis when the latter was put on the stand, and scarcely moved his eyes during Ellis's story. A crow-bar about six feet long and story. A crow-bar about six feet long and weighing about twenty-five pounds, and a rusty axe, were handed Ellis, and he recognized them as the veritable weapons with which Neal and Craft killed the children. The weapons were also examined by the jury. It is untrue that Ellis is failing mentally and ht is untrue that Emis is faiting mentary and physically. He is evidently gaining in strength and courage. At one point in the cross-examination he laughed at a question asked him. He talked low, but rather distinctly, and the jury were compelled to move nearer the witness stand to hear him. It appears to be the disposition of the defense to make the cress-examination of Ellis long and teditors as it was not half finished when

> What the Papers Say. PROBABLE MURDER.

Savannah News.

Yesterday morning, about seven o'clock, the body of a white longshoreman named Michael Shea was discovered in the alley way under the bluff at the foot of Houston street, westerful he bigging. west of the rice mill. The report of the dis-covery soon collected a large crowd, and the coroner was at once notified and proceeded to the spot. The re-mains were viewed, when the coroner stated that the inquest would be postponed until twelve o'clock to-day. The supposition at first was that the unfortunate man had fallen from the top of the wall, a distance of ten or twelve feet, but on examination it was dis-covered that the skuil was fractured back of the right ear, and the ear also being severely cut. As the body was raised a stream of blood gushed from the left ear, and the impression from this fact is that the blow which fractured his skull was dealt with a billy or some other blunt instrument. One of his shoes was partly off, and one of his toes was cut as though with a knife. The right was cut as though with a knile. The right temple was disfigured by an ugly bruise, ap-parently inflicted by a blow of a man's fist. There were no other marks of violence found. A stift black hat which he wore was resting on his face, partly shading his eyes, and it is presumed was placed there by his assailant. The only presumption is that the deceased was murdered, but whether he met his death in a fraces or was ruthlessly assassingted can was murdered, but whether he met his death in a fracas or was ruthlessly assassinated, can not now be said, and the affair is for the present shrouded in mystery. There are various surmises and reports, but as nothing definite or reliable could be ascertained, we refrain from 'mentioning them. The coroner's inquest this morning may develop something that will show in what manner, and at whose hands the unfortunate man met his death. We are informed that he was generally of a quiet, peaceable disposition, and so far as intimate friends know had no enemies. He was unmarried, and was about thirty years of age, and leaves quite a number of relatives, who reside in the eastern portion of the city. He was seen at several places on Saturday night, the last time, so far as we can learn between nine and ten ern portion of the city. He was seen at several places on Saturday night, the last time, so far as we can learn, between nine and ten o'clock. After that period his whereabouts are unknown to any of his relatives. The investigation by the coroner will be thorough, and it is to be hoped some information will be obtained that will throw some light upon this mysterious tragedy. this mysterious tragedy.

SUICIDE IN EUFAULA.

Macon Telegraph. The news of a very unfortunate affair in Eufaula reached us yesterday morning. From a gentleman who lives near the residence of the suicide, and who was among the first to reach him after the fatal shot was fired, we obtained the following particulars: W. H. Locke, brother of R. D. Locke, a well-known Locke, brother of R. D. Locke, a well-known republican now holding a government position in Washington, has been postmaster at Eufaula for a long time. About a month ago his accounts were found to be incorrect, whether by reason of crookedness or errors is not said, and he was temporarily suspended, a gentleman by the name of Russell being put in his place. The bondsmen of Locke were called upon to make good the alleged deficit, which amounted to something like $7,000. Two of the bondsmen had Locke arrested, but his attorneys said they would be responsible for his torneys said they would be responsible for his forthcoming, and he was released on Saturday last. He told his attorneys he would be on hand if he was alive. On Sunday morning Mr. Locke arose in exceedingly depressed spirits. He had the idea that while inno-cent of any crime in connection with the matter, he was being hounded to death by his over-cautious bondsmen. The idea so worked upon him that he took his pistol and in his own house, before any of his family could stay his hand, placed the pistol to his temple and fired. He fell across the bed dead, and in and fired. He fell across the bed dead, and in this position was found by his neighbors, who heard the pistol shot and came rushing in. He had a very large family of children who are thus summarily deprived of support. We learn that Mr. Locke had a large number of friends in Eufaula who are satisfied that he could have fully explained and made good his apparent discrepancies. As it was, he felt as if he was being unjustly accused and madelgiously persecuted, and was thus driven

After arriving here he went down to the wharf of the steamer katie and begged to be allowed the privilege of working his way on the steamer to Augusta. The officers needed no extra help, and declined to comply with the young man's request, but he was so importunate that they finally yielded, and assigned him to some slight duty. When the steamer was near Purysburg, about 9 o'clock on Tuesday night, on her trip to Augusta, the young man was accidentally drowned. He was, it appears, moving about the deck, when his foot struck a gainst something which caused him to lose his balance and he tumbled finto the river. The night was dark, and the steamer being under way at the time, it was impossible to render him assistance promptly. Every effort was made to rescue him, but to no purpose, and he was drowned. A GOAT WITH EIGHTEEN HORNS. Wrightsville Recorder.

Judge M. H. Mason has a curiosity in the way of a goat. The goat, which is about one year old, has eighteen horns—two on his head and four on each foot and leg. Those on his feet and legs grew from his hoofs, and are now from four to eight inches in length. Reuben, son of the judge, cut them off about four months ago, and the above stated length shows the rapidity of their growth. This goat is indeed a curiosity, and would be of great service in an animal show.

The Boyd Sensation in Sweetwater, Tenner Talk with the Author of the Crime-Two Geor-gia Ladies Severely Wounded by a Desperate Lover, Who Kills Himself.

Knoxville Tribune.

It was announced in the Tribune some days ago that Joseph L. Boyd, who killed his uncle. Mayor Thomas G. Boyd, of Sweetwater, had been allowed a preliminary trial and bail was refused him. For comfort, such as could be given here, he was brought and placed in the Knox county jail Sunday evening.

Being aware that sentiment was strongly against Joe Boyd and knowing that there are two sides to all questions, a Tribune reporter called on him last night to get the other view of the tragedy.

The prisoner was confined in a cell with Dr. Weir and Don Lusby. When informed by Jailer Hood that friends were to see him. Boyd came forward to the grated door and welcomed us to his presence.

We informed him that we had received and published certain information regarding the homicide, and that we would be glad to hear his side of the question. He took a seat in a chair drawn up to the little door, and in a pleasant voice and easy flow of language told ing business and represented. I had come up to settle some business matters. That $500 note was a crooked piece of business, and when I saw my aunt she agreed with me that it should be settled. I sent by Mr. Cannon for Mr. Joe Bogle, Mr. Tom Boyd's reprsentative, but instead of bringing Bogle back, he brought Tom Boyd. Mr. Cannon had told me Tom Boyd was not in town. Just before they came my aunt told me of a threat made by Boyd in a letter to her husband. When she saw them coming when he came in we talked together. I noticed he eyed me very closely, but I said nothing. We talked first about some property, and he explained that satisfactorily. who had been appointed to assist me in settling up my uncle's business, because the matter might fall into other hands, I pulled out my note book and my aunt went for a pen and ink. He wouldn't write; just peremptorily refused to do it. She asked him if there would be any harm in it, and he replied that the note was out of his hands. It was given to satisfy a note to Mr. S. P. Hale. Was given to satisfy a note to Mr. S. F. Haie.

I made two or three propositions, but he would accept none of them. He said, "You do not think I took any advantages, do you?"

I had already told my aunt and Mr. Cannon that I thought he had, and I could not do otherwise than say, "I think you did." He said, "It is false," jumped to his feet, unbutoned his coat as he rose. I thought he was said, "It is false," jumped to his feet, unout-toned his coat as he rose. I thought he was armed. I was sitting in an arm chair and got up and began to back. He started toward me and picked up a chair on his way. He had the chair over his shoulder as if he intended to strike. I presented my pistol and commanded him to stop. I kept retreating until I got clear out into the hall where I fired under my left arm into the hall where I fired under my left arm into the hall, where I fired under my left arm

Mr. Cannon said, "Joe, I am sorry for this."
I said "I am too, but he brought it on himself." My aunt then came from the other room and asked me not to go. I said "Ves. room and asked me not to go. I said, "Yes, I will go and give myself up;" which I did

She said the letter he had written to her husband spoke of me and my family "as those dogs," and said when he saw Joe he her husband spoke of me and my lamily as those dogs," and said when he saw Joe he could not hardly keep his hands off him. When I thought of the threat I could not do otherwise. He came at me like an infuriated man. made and has sharp features. His hair is a light, wavy brown, and inclined to thinness on top. A pair of keen black eyes looked out upon us through the cracks in the door, which lighted up as he spoke. His voice is pleasant, and he speaks with a fluency and correctness that is seldom heard in the prison cells. He is a man about twenty-eight years of age. He is confident his case is a very light one. He and his companions, through the kindness and attention of Jailer Hood, are furnished with all the luxuries and conveniences that the law will allow.

The Louislana Tragedy.

Macon Telegraph. Telegraphic mention of the recent shooting of Mrs Thompson and Mrs. Lewis has been made in these columns, and we are now enabled to lay before our readers the particulars of the fearful tragedy. As the parties have many relatives and acquaintances in Macon, the accounts of the crime possess a local interest which warrant their reproduction. Mrs. Lewis way Miss Emplinied of Engliquid elictor. Lewis was Miss Erminie de Graffenried, sister of William K. and of Marshall de Graffen-ried, formerly of Macon, but now a lawyer in Atlanta. Mr. Will S. Lewis was a nephew of

Atlanta. Aff. Will S. Lewis was a nepnew of Mrs. Robert Collins, of this city. From the Galveston News we take the following:

News reached us yesterday of a terrible tragedy which occurred on the Bonnie Doon curable by plantation (known as the Puckette place), in Red River parish, last Friday night, resulting in the wounding of two accomplished ladies, and the death of a well known young man by his own hand. The particulars, as we learned them, are about as follows: Several years ago Mr. Will. S. Lewis, son of the late Judge J. Lang Lewis, of Minden, married Miss Erminie de Graffenreid, of Macon, Georgia, a beautiful and highly accomplished lady, and brought her to Louisiana to reside. For some brought her to Louisiana to reside. For some time they lived on the plantation referred to above, and Robert S. Lewis, a brother of the husband, resided with them. The latter is spoken of by those who knew him as high-toned and honorable and much liked by all who were acquainted with him. Some few months ago Mr. Will S. with him. Some few months ago Mr. Will S. Lewis died and his widow remained on the plantation, which was placed in charge of his brother Robert. It seems that Robert fell desperately in love with the wife of his deceased brother, and, the story goes, she promised him not to leave the place. It was his intention, no doubt, to have claimed her. owed sister of Mrs. Lewis, came to the place, and an arrangement was made between them to return to Macon, which somewhat exasperated Robert. The two ladies expected to leave on the down trip of the Jewel, which boat they were awaiting. On Friday night last Robert went into the room where his sister-in law was and had some conversation with her about and had some conversation with her about going away, which resulted in his shooting her in the right breast with a pistol. She fell to the floor, and her sister, Mrs. Thompson, hearing the report of the pistol, came out of her room and starfed toward them, when the exasperated young man shot her in the side of the neck, the ball passing around, not making, we learn, a serious wound. Young Lewis then knelt beside his sister-in-law and Lewis then knet beside his sister-in-law and begged her to speak to him, but she kept her eyes and lips closed. Supposing he had killed her, he placed the pistot to the side of his head and blew his brains out, falling beside her a corpse. Our informant said the wound of Mrs. Lewis, he learned was considered most all Rebert. learned, was considered mortal. Robert Lewis will be remembered as the young man who, in a duel shortly after the war, shot Hon. Clarence Pratt, who was a mem-ber of the legislature from Claiborne parish, from the effects of which wound, it is thought, he afterwards died. The cause of the duel was some remarks made by Pratt in the legislature reflecting upon the character of Lewis's father. Many of the friends of Lewis think the death of Pratt has been weighing upon his mind since, and at times made him somewhat reckless.

The Standard, of the 5th, gives the following additional particulars:
In a conversation last night with Mr. Charles
Puckette, clerk of the steamer Kate Kinney, which had just arrived, we learned that our report of the tragedy in Red river parish, published yesterday, was in the main correct. The two ladies were removed to Coushatta, and Mr. Puckette learned "I came up to Sweetwater on account of from Doctor Guthrie, the attending my uncle's death, with whom I had been doover, but no hopes were entertained for Mrs. Lewis. Young Lewis was buried near the place where he committed the fearful deed. It seems the tragedy occurred about 2 o'clock or Sunday morning, and was premeditated. Young Lewis left his room armed with a double-barreled shotgun, a pistol, and a hatchet, and going to the room where his mother was steeping, he quietly locked her in, and then went into the adjoining room where Mrs. Lewis and her sister, Mrs. Thompson, were steeping leaving his shotgun. son, were sleeping, leaving his shotgun outside the door. There were two doors to the room, and in locking them he aroused Lewis, who stepped from the bed to her husband. When she saw them coming she asked me if I would meet him (Boyd) in a friendly manner. I said certainly, and the had come to brain her, and fired his pistol, the ball taking effect in the breast. She fell near the head of the bed. Mrs. Thompson then jumped out of the bed and he fired at her, the ball taking effect in her neck. He then went and kneit beside Mrs. Lewis and tried to make her speak to him, but she did When the matter of the check was brought up I asked him to give me a written state ment that I could satisfy Mr. Brannon, unfortunate young man and the colored peo-ple on the place, and the news of the fearful tragedy soon spread throughout the neighbor-nds Working on the Railroad—Murder of a Three Year-Old Child—An Alabama Suicide—A Drum-mer's Peril—The Macon and Brunswick Extension—The Butaula Suicide.

ELBERTON, January 15.-[Special.]-A large number of hands are preparing to leave here to-morrow to work on the Rome extension of the Macon and Brunswick railroad, which will interfere seriously with the arrangements of some of our farmers. - The preliminary trial of Messrs. Almond and others for an assault on Judge Oliver will commence the county court to-morrow. Judge Oliver is slowly improving. A young man named R. T. Smith shot and mortally wounded a negro child about three years old, in this county, last Saturday evening. The cause for the deed is not known. Smith made his escape. The child is supposed to be dead now. The coroner has gone to make an investigation.

CARTERSVILLE, January 16 .- [Special.]-The superior court is still in session. This week will be devoted to the criminal docket. There were five convictions to-day. General Henry R. Jackson, of Savannah, is attending court. The grand jury of last week recommended to his excellency, Governor Colquitt, the pardon of John W. Haney, of this county, convicted at the last term of the court of forgery. Ha-ney is in very bad health, and it is thought he cannot live long. — Our clerk, Mr. F. M. Dur-ham, after a long illness, is again at his post of duty. Captain J. L. Neal is improving

PROBABLE MURDER.

Savannah News. Yesterday morning, about seven o'clock, the body of a white longshoreman named Michael Shea was discovered in the alley way under the bluff at the foot of Houston street, west of the rice mill. The report of the discovery soon collected a large crowd, and the coroner was at once notified and proceeded to the spot. The remains were viewed, when the coroner stated that the inquest would be postponed until and proceeded to the spot. The remains were viewed, when the coroner stated that the inquest would be postponed until twelve o'clock to-day. The supposition at first was that the unfortunate man had fallen from the top of the wall, a distance of ten or twelve feet, but on examination it was discovered that the skull was fracture. The supposition are the skull was fracture. covered that the skuil was fractured back of the right ear, and the ear also being severely cut. As the body was raised a stream of blood gushed from the left ear, and the impression from this fact is that the blow which m this fact is that the blow which fractured his skull was dealt with a billy or some other blunt instrument. One of his shoes was partly off, and one of his toes was cut as though with a knife. The right temple was disfigured by an ugly bruise, apparently inflicted by a blow of a man's fist. There were no other marks of violence found. There were no other marks of violence found. A stiff black hat which he wore was resting on his face, partly shading his eyes, and it is presumed was placed there by his assailant. The only presumption is that the deceased was murdered, but whether he met his death in a fracas or was ruthlessly assassinated, can not now be said, and the affair is for the present shranded in mystery. There are various ent shrouded in mystery. There are various surmises and reports, but as nothing definite or reliable could be ascertained, we refrain from 'mentioning them. The coroner's inquest this morning may develop something that will show in what manner, and at whose hands the unfortunate man met his death. We are infortunate that

eral places on Saturday night, the last time

Macon Telegraph. The news of a very unfortunate affair in Eufaula reached us yesterday morning. From a gentleman who lives near the residence of the suicide, and who was among the first to reach him after the fatal shot was fired, we obtained the following particulars: W. H. Locke, brother of R. D. Locke, a well-known republican now holding a government posi-tion in Washington, has been postmaster at Eufaula for a long time. About a month ago his accounts were found to be incorrect, whether by reason of crookedness or errors is not said, and he was temporarily suspended, a gentleman by the name of Russell being put in his place. The bondsmen of Locke were called bondsmen of Locke were called upon to make good the alleged deficit, which amounted to something like $7,000. Two of the bondsmen had Locke arrested, but his attorneys said they would be responsible for his forthcoming, and he was released on Saturday last. He told his attorneys he would be on hand if he was alive. On Sunday morning Mr. Locke arose in exceedingly depressed spirits. He had the idea that while innocent of any crime in connection with the matter, he was being hounded to spirits. He had the idea that while inno-cent of any crime in connection with the matter, he was being hounded to death by his over-cautious bondsmen. The idea so worked upon him that he took his pistol and in his own house, before any of his family could stay his hand, placed the pistol to his temple and fired. He fell across the bed dead, and in and fired. He fell across the bed dead, and in this position was found by his neighbors, who heard the pistol shot and came rushing in. He had a very large family of children who are thus summarily deprived of support. We learn that Mr. Locke had a large number of friends in Eufaula who are satisfied that he could have fully explained and made good his apparent discrepancies. As it was, he had sumjustly accussed and his apparent discrepancies. As it was, he felt as if he was being unjustly accused and maliciously persecuted, and was thus driven to commit the deed.

A CIRCUS MAN. Savannah News.

While Coup's circus was in Atlanta a young man about sixteen or eighteen years of age became infatuated with the tinsel and glare of the saw dust ring, and ran away from hi comfortable home to join the company. He followed them to Jacksonville, where he was taken sick and was left behind. He was confined to his bed for several days, and when he recovered was out of funds, but managed to reach Savannah through the assistance of some kindly disposed persons. After arriving here he went down to the wharf of the steamer Katie and begged to be allowed the privilege of working his way on the steamer to Augusta. The officers needed no extra help, and declined to comply with the young man's request, but he was so importunate that they finally yielded, and assigned him to some slight duty. When the steamer was near Purysburg, about 9 o'clock on Tuesday fined to his bed for several days, and when he night, on her trip to Augusta, the young man was accidentally drowned. He was, it appears, moving about the deck, when his foot struck a gainst something which caused him to lose his balance and he tumbled into the river. The night was dark, and the steamer being under way at the time, it was impossible to render him assistance promptly. Every effort render him assistance promptly. Every effort was made to rescue him, but to no purpose, and he was drowned. He had stated that he lived in Atlanta, where his mother resides, and that he had run away to join the circus, but he failed to give his name, and it is not known who he was. He was, as stated, ap-parently between 16 and 18 years of age, about 5 feet 5 inches in height, slim built, and of dark complexion.

M. & B. R. R. EXTENSION. Monroe Advertiser.

Superintendent Edwards says the following stations will be established along the line of the extension of the Macon and Brunswick railroad from Macon to Atlanta. The distance railroad from Macon to Atlanta. The distance of each is given from Macon: Holston, 8½ miles; Dames's Ferry, 15; Iceberg, 21; Towaliga, 25; Indian Springs, 36½; Jackson, 41½; Locust Grove, 51½; McDonough, 59¼; Stockbridge, 69½; car-shed in Atlanta, 87½. No doubt there will be other stations created, but these are the important ones. The following streams will be crossed: Savage, Pattlespale, Régaver, Dam Towbler. The following streams will be crossed: Savage, Rattlesnake, Beaver Dam, Towbler, Ponder's Lick and Pate's. The rivers are Towaliga, Little Cotfon, Indian and South, Bridges will be spanned over these streams. None of them are at all dangerous. For the most part they are small branches dignified by the name of creeks.

Mr. Castello, one of the leading contractors

Mr. Castello, one of the leading contractors the line thinks the road will be completed by the first day of June. Track-laying is going on rapidly. The country to be opened up by this road is equal to the best in Georgia. Besides fine river lands, immense water powrs will be made convenient to transportation and this will insure the erection of cotton factories, mills, etc.

DEATH IN HENRY COUNTY. Monroe Advertiser.

Monroe Advertiser.

Mr. Allen W. Turner, an old and highly respected citizen of McDonough, Henry county, died on Sunday, the 8th instant. He was the father of Hon. J. H. Turner, judge of our county count. Mr. Turner had lived in Henry county thirty-five years, and was very popular with his fellow-citizens. He has represented his county in the legislature several times and served with Senator Brown in the state senate in 1849 with distinction. His character was noble and his deeds magnanicharacter was noble and his deeds magnanimous Possessed of a large fortune, he was especially kind to the poor, and in him they always found a true and devoted friend. No man in the county will be so sadly missed. His charities and deeds of kindness were quietly and unostentatiously done and the satisfaction to him consisted in a knowledge that the wants of others, in need, were sup-plied. He had attained to a ripe old age and his children and friends know that when the messenger came, it closed a life of honor and

HON. A. H. STEPHENS. Monroe Advertiser.

We believe it will after a while become a well established fact that the great commoner, otherwise little Aleck Stephens, has the "levelest" head of them all. He sometimes opposes the democratic caucus, but it nearly always turns out that he is right. When the democrats in conent shrouded in mystery. There are various surmises and reports, but as nothing definite or reliable could be ascertained, we refrain from 'mentioning them. The coroner's inquest this morning may develop something that will show in what manner, and at whose hands the unfortunate man met his death. We are informed that he was generally of a quiet, peaceable disposition, and so far as intimate friends know had no enemies. He was unmarried, and was about thirty years of age, and leaves quite a number of relatives, who reside in the eastright. about thirty years of age, and leaves quite a number of relatives, who reside in the east-ern portion of the city. of ar as we can learn, between nine and ten o'clock. After that period his whereabouts are unknown to any of his relatives. The investigation by the coroner will be thorough, and it is to be hoped some information will be obtained that will throw some light upon this mysterious tragedy. Yesterday three negroes, Green Brown, Jeremiah Brown and Joseph Turner, were enaged in excavating a sink in the rear of T. S Spear's jewelry store, near a brick wall. They had gone down about twelve feet and Green was throwing dirt to a scaffold half way up, from which Joe was throwing it to the surface, while Jere was standing on the edge pre-paratory to going down, when the earth next to the wall gave way, precipitating a portion of the wall and a mass of dirt on the working darkey in the pit, crushing him down and burying him up to his neck. The other two were struck by brick, but not much hurt. Green was dug out as quickly as possible and carried to his home. He was terribly bruised, and that he was not killed was a miracle.

A DRUMMER IN A PERILOUS POSITION.

Columbus Times. Yesterday, Mr. William Barr, the city sales an of Kern & Loeb, was driving their deliv ery wagon in Girard, and just after crossing the bridge over the great ravine on the Seale road, the horse became frightened at a yoke of steers. Whirling immediately around he rushed on to the bridge, hurling the wagon rushed on to the bridge, furning the wagon against the banister over whidh Mr. Barr was pitched headlong. Fortunately the plank of the bridge extended a few feet beyond the railing, on which he lodged, while the seat of the wagon went over him, striking his head, and was precipitated in the ravine fifty feet below. The horse broke loose from the wagon, but was soon caught. It was a narrow escape for Mr. Barr, who was very badly bruised, though no bones were broken.

A ONE-HORSE FARM. Monroe Advertiser.

Mr. Harris Smith, son of Mr. Gus Smith, was the proprietor of a one-horse farm last year, and not a very large one-horse farm at that. He planted ten acres in cotton and six in corn. He paid out for labor, in making his crop, thirty-five cents only. He made nine bales of cotton, weighing five hundred and forty pounds each and on the planted and fifty the control of the control o forty pounds each, and one hundred and fifty bushels of corn. He used eight hundred pounds of guano on his cotton, not quite one hundred pounds per acre. Had his crop not suffered from the dry weather, he would have made a bale and a half of cotton per acre.

A GOAT WITH EIGHTEEN HORNS.

Wrightsville Recorder. Judge M. H. Mason has a curiosity in the way of a goat. The goat, which is about one year old, has eighteen horns—two on his head and four on each foot and leg. Those on his feet and legs grew from his hoofs, and are now from four to eight inches in length. Reuben, son of the judge, cut them off about four months ago, and the above stated length shows the rapidity of their growth. This goat is indeed a curiosity, and would be of great service in an animal show.

Talk with the Author of the Crime-Two Georgia Ladies Severely Wounded by a Desperate Lover, Who Kills Himself.

Knoxville Tribune.

It was announced in the Tribune some days ago that Joseph L. Boyd, who killed his uncle. Mayor Thomas G. Boyd, of Sweetwater, had been allowed a preliminary trial and bail was refused him. For comfort, such as could be given here, he was brought and placed in the Knox county jail Sunday evening.

Being aware that sentiment was strongly against Joe Boyd and knowing that there are two sides to all questions, a Tribune reporter called on him last night to get the other view

The prisoner was confined in a cell with Dr. Weir and Don Lusby. When informed by Jailer Hood that friends were to see him, Boyd came forward to the grated door and welcomed us to his presence.

We informed him that we had received and published certain information regarding the homicide, and that we would be glad to hear his side of the question. He took a seat in a chair drawn up to the little door, and in a pleasant voice and easy flow of language told

ing business and represented. I had come up to settle some business matters. That $500 note was a crooked piece of business, and when I saw my aunt she agreed with me that it should be settled. I sent by Mr. Cannon for Mr. Joe Bogle, Mr. Tom Boyd's reprsentative, but instead of bringing Bogle back, he brought Tom Boyd. Mr. Cannon had told me Tom Boyd was not in town. Just before they came my aunt told me of a threat made by Boyd in a letter to her husband. When she saw them coming she asked me if I would meet him (Boyd) in a friendly manner. I said certainly, and when he came in we talked together. I noticed he eyed me very closely, but I said nothing. We talked first about some property and he explained that extinct the same than the bed and he fired at her, the ball taking effect in her neck. He then went and kneit beside Mrs. Lewis and tried to make her speak to him but she did tried to make her speak to him but she did to her husband. When she saw them coming erty, and he explained that satisfactorily. When the matter of the check was brought up I asked him to give me a written statement that I could satisfy Mr. Brannon, who had been appointed to assist me in settling up my uncle's business, because the matter might fall into other hands. I pulled out my note book and my aunt went for a pen and ink. He wouldn't write; just peremptorily refused to do it. She asked him if there would be any harm in it, and he re-plied that the note was out of his hands. It was given to satisfy a note to Mr. S. P. Hale. was given to satisfy a note to Mr. S. P. Hale. I made two or three propositions, but he would accept none of them. He said, "You do not think I took any advantages, do you?" I had already told my aunt and Mr. Cannon that I thought he had, and I could not do otherwise than say, "I think you did." He said, "It is false," jumped to his feet, unbuttoned his coat as he rose. I thought he was armed. I was sitting in an arm chair. armed. I was sitting in an arm chair and got up and began to back. He started toward me and picked up a chair on his way. He had the chair over his shoulder as if he intended to strike. I presented my pistol and commanded him to stop. I kept retreating until I got clear out into the hall, where I fired under my left arm which was raised in defense. He just walked into the hall, where I fired under my left arm which was raised in defense. He just walked back to the same position where he first stood and said he was hit. I began to shoot again and thought of myself and fired up, the ball striking the wall high up.

Mr. Cannon said, "Joe; I am sorry for this." I said "I am too, but he brought it on himself." My aunt then came from the other room and asked me not to go. I said, "Yes, I will go and give myself up;" which I did do.

During the last few months through my Uncle Alban I tried to settled the feud exist ing between the families and make peace with him. When I came up I did not know whether or not he had succeeded in producing a pleasant relationship. When we were arranging the business matters the the which my aunt had told me of a few min before in a half whisper was ringing in my ears. She said the letter he had written to ears. She said the letter he had written to hier husband spoke of me and my family "as those dogs," and said when he saw Joe he could not hardly keep his hands off him. When I thought of the threat I could not do otherwise. He came at me like an infuriated man. Some time ago he was in Columbus prying into matters around the business of my uncle, and came to the store, but I went had the store of the store of the store of the store. back into my office and said nothing to him. I knew he was an impetuous man, and I did not want to be insulted.

I had stayed away from Sweetwater when I wanted to see my folks on account of this unpleasantness between the families. I regret that I was forced to do it, but he would have besten up and a scalar bill. I wanted that I was forced to do it, but he would have beaten me up and perhaps killed me."

Joseph Boyd is a medium sized man, spare made and has sharp features. His hair is a light, wavy brown, and inclined to thinness on top. A pair of keen plack eyes looked out upon us through the cracks in the door, which lighted up as he spoke. His voice is pleasant, and he speaks with a fluency and correctness that is seldom heard in the prison cells. He is a man about twenty-eight years of age. He is confident his case is a very light one. He and his companions, through the kindness and attention of Jailer Hood, are furnished with all the luxuries and conveniences that the law will allow.

Macon Telegraph. Telegraphic mention of the recent shooting of Mrs Thompson and Mrs. Lewis has been of Mrs Thompson and Mrs. Lewis has been made in these columns, and we are now enabled to lay before our readers the particulars of the fearful tragedy. As the parties have many relatives and acquaintances in Macon, the accounts of the crime possess a local interest which warrant their reproduction. Mrs. Lewis was Miss Erminie de Graffenried, sister of William K. and of Marshall de Graffenried, formerly of Macon, but now a lawyer in Atlanta. Mr. Will S. Lewis was a nephew of Mrs. Robert Collins, of this city. From the Galveston News we take the following:

News reached us yesterday of a terrible

News reached us yesterday of a terrible tragedy which occurred on the Bonnie Doon plantation (known as the Puckette place), in Red River parish, last Friday night, resulting the wounding the place of in the wounding of two accomplished ladies and the death of a well known young man by his own hand. The particulars, as we learned them, are about as follows: Several years ago Mr. Will. S. Lewis, son of the late Judge J. Lang Lewis, of Minden, married Miss Erminie de Graffenreid, of Macon, Georgia, a beautiful and highly accomplished lady, and brought her to Louisiana to reside. For some time they lived on the also tring they accomplished. time they lived on the plantation referred to above, and Robert S. Lewis, a brother of the husband, resided with them. The latter is spoken of by those latter is spoken of by those who knew him as high-toned and honorable and much liked by all who were acquainted with him. Some few months ago Mr. Will S. Lewis died and his widow remained on the bewis died and his widow remained on the plantation, which was placed in charge of his brother Robert. It seems that Robert fell desperately in love with the wife of his deceased brother, and, the story goes, she promised him not to leave the place. It was his intention, no doubt, to have claimed her hand at the proper time.

A short time ago Mrs. Thompson, a widowed sister of Mrs. Lewis, came to the place, and an arrangement was made between 'them to return to Macon, which somewhat exaspera-ted Robert. The two ladies expected to leave ted Robert. The two ladies expected to leave on the down trip of the Jewel, which boat they were awaiting. On Friday night last Robert went into the room where his sister-in law was and had some conversation with her about going away, which resulted in his shooting her in the right breast with a pistol. She fell to the floor, and her sister, Mrs. Thompson, hearing the report of the pistol, came out of her room and started toward them, when the exasperated young man shot her in the side of the neck, the ball passing around, not making, we learn, a serious wound. Young making, we learn, a serious wound. Young Lewis then knelt beside his sister-in-law and Lewis then knelt beside his sister-in-law and begged her to speak to him, but she kept her eyes and lips closed. Supposing he had killed her, he placed the pistor to the side of his head and blew his brains out, falling beside her a corpse. Our inside of his head and blew his brains out, falling beside her a corpse. Our informant said the wound of Mrs. Lewis, he learned, was considered mortal. Robert Lewis will be remembered as the young man who, in a duel shortly after the war, shot Hon. Clarence Pratt, who was a member of the legislature from Claiborne parish, from the effects of which wound it is thought. from the effects of which wound, it is thought, he afterwards died. The cause of the duel was some remarks made by Pratt in the legislature reflecting upon the character of Lewis's father. Many of the friends of Lewis think the death of Pratt has been weighing upon his mind since, and at times made him somewhat reckless. The Standard, of the 5th, gives the following additional particulars:

In aconversation last night with Mr. Charles
Puckette, clerk of the steamer Kate Kinney, which had just arrived, we learned that our report of the tragedy in Red river parish, published yesterday, was in the main correct. the following story:

"I came up to Sweetwater on account of my uncle's death, with whom I had been do-Lewis. Young Lewis was buried near the place where he committed the fearful deed. it seems the tragedy occurred about 2 o'clock on Sunday morning, and was premeditated. Young Lewis left his room armed with a double-barreled shotgun, a pistol, and a hatchet, and going to the room where his mother was sieeping, he quietly locked her in, and then went into the adjoining room where Mrs. Lewis and her sister, Mrs. Thompson, were sleeping, leaving his shotgui outside the door. There were two doors to Lewis, who stepped from the bed tried to make her speak to him, but she did not, and he leaned over, kissed her, put the pistol to his head, blew his brains out and fell a corpse beside her. Mrs. Thompson passed out of the window and aroused the mother of the unfortunate young man and the colored peo-ple on the place, and the news of the fearful tragedy soon spread throughout the neighbor-

THE Austrians have had a hard time of i in trying to keep its legacy from the Russo-Turkish war. The Balkan provinces are again in revolt. The reicharath is to be asked for a heavy appropriation to conduct operations against the insurgents.

THE wastage of material furnishes a clever New York correspondent with a theme for his pen, in which wealth is found in tatters and heroes in rag-pickers, and even history receives valuable aid from the old letters in many a family rubbish barrel.

ADELINA PATTI.

The Diva is to sing in Georgia's capital. No other southern city, New Orleans excepted, will have an opportunity to hear the singer, who is sought after in the proudest cities of the old world, and whose income is something fabulous. She sings in Atlanta for five dollar a seat, whereas in Vienna or London she receives fifty francs. The cracker city may therefore consider herself somewhat set up continuance of the system. by the approaching event. But we are not proud. We will still be glad to see in best seats the good people Charleston and Savannah and æsthetic Macon, and words of pity and patronizing airs shall be barred out.

If success before the most critical and culvated audiences be a true test of merit, the singer that will appear in DeGive's next Wednesday night, is the greatest the world has ever known. From the time of her debut, nearly twenty years ago, she has been with out a rival. She has in all that time maintained her place at the top of the musical ladder, and a shower of money and honors and praises has fallen continuously at her feet. Our own people will have a convenient opportunity of comparing other favorites with the one that the world has favored the most, and this alone will be worth to many the price that the management has named.

A QUESTION OF ECONOMY. The commissioners of streets and sewers but they did not ask for one cent too much to make the streets of the city reasonably useful-to render them safe and practicable for man and beast. They ask that $50,000 be appropriated for new work on a right basis. appropriation would enable the commissioners to put $150,000 during the present year into pavements that will defy the storms of the winter season. The proposition is not unreasonable; on the other hand, we believe it is true economy. If the damage that bad roads and sidewalks have caused to 50,000 people in the city during the past fifteen days could be ascertained, and estimated in dollars and cents, it would be seen that the city has this year paid out on account of the streets more than the commissioners ask for. And this weather-and-mud tax has been assessed in the most disagreeable manner. It has been levied in part on the health of the pent-up little ones, in good part on the suffering poor, and in part on the city's reputation for healthfulness, comfort and enterprise. We cannot afford to keep up these levies of neglect and ill weather, for they disgrace us in the eyes of the world, and sooner or later they will depreciate our property. The new commissioners are right when they say it is economy to do substantially and well whatever is done in the improvement of the city's streets and sewers. The sum asked for may be somewhat burdensome, but it cannot be as much of a drawback to our property owners as the mud is at present. Of the two lines of policy, let us choose the most economical, and in this view of the In Washington the impression is that Dr matter few men will be apt to hesitate. We cannot, individually or collectively, afford to be mud-bound thirty days in order to save an annual expenditure of three dollars a head. THE CREDIT SYSTEM IN GEORGIA

For several years past The Constitution has been warning the farmers and business men of Georgia against that insidious foe to substantial prosperity, the credit system, and it s our purpose to repeat this warning at reasonable intervals, but without hoping to bring about such a reform as the interests of the people themselves demand. The precepts however, which cautious persons feel moved to put forth in regard to the disaster that lurks behind the credit system are not altogether without justification. Recent events are calculated to give pith and emphasis to is very precious. whatever may be said upon this trite subject From behind the apparent comfort and secu rity of the credit system, disaster occasionally reaches forth its sharp claws and gathers in a victim. When the announcement of a business failure is made, people shake their heads with astonishment and regret, and tor a time those who are more fortunate, or who happen to be temporarily out of reach of the claws that lie concealed behind credit, hurry hither and thither gathering up the loose ends of their business and trimming their sails. In a short while everything is serene again until presently the claws of disaster appear in a new and unexpected quarter, and another victim disappears. It is very easy to draw a moral from all this, and to put it on paper, but the difficulty is the moral which it is fashionable to apply in such cases cannot reasonably be applied debate on Mr. Ingalls's resolution regarding here. The credit system in Georgia has be the pension arrearages bill. The whole truth come an institution. It is an institution of the swindle is that the democrats were built up and fostered by a species of legislaafraid to do their duty and oppose the bill, tion little short of vicious. Nearly all our while the republicans threw it out as a sop to laws since the war have been made in the interest of the debtor class-just as if legislation could draw a line between those who are credidistributed to the 50,000,000 of the country. Mr. Miller, it may be remarked, is a manufacturer of tors. It is fair to say, however, that paper some of these laws seemed to be absolutely demanded by the situation, but the results have been demoralizing in the extreme. They have all been in the direction of establishing a vicious credit system, and out of this our peo ple and our business interests must work their way as best they may.

It is not easy to suggest a remedy. The farmer, indebted to the small provision dealer, is compelled to pitch his crop pretty much at the dictation of the latter. This is the secret of the all-cotton policy which the majority of our farmers are compelled to pursue, although they know it is ruinous in the end. the prospective crop of cotton that they can obtain credit. Another difficulty in the way just now is the so-called usury law which assumes to fix the rate of interest at 8 per cent. Those who have money to lend can secure better rates and run no risks, and thus the farmer is compelled to buy his fertilizers and his supplies on time and pay a rate of interest that runs all the way from 50 to 100 per cent. It seems to us that a usury law which professes to protect the people by regulating the rate of interest on money ought also to regulate the usurious profits on fertilizers and plantation supplies. But this species of usury, in the midst of much suffering, bids fair to reguitself. The farmer cannot meet the obligations imposed upon him, the small dealers fail, and drag down the wholesale dealers with them. The evil of inflated credits works its own cure, but the cure is distressing and disastrous. The only remedy we know of is to be found in the abolition of the credit system in Georgia. The effects of this would undoubtedly be distressing, but it would not involve the wide-spread disaster now threatened by a

THERE is much speculation over the attitude of a uror in the Guiteau case. Nevertheless, we believe the jury will bring in a verdict to the effect that the assassin is a representative republican and then he will be taken out and hanged.

GENTLEMEN who supported Mr. Norwood are somewhat disposed to resent certain thoughtless and uncalled for remarks in one of our exchanges. Such sensitiveness as this is abnormal. The Norwood men ought to know, and they do know that they occupy front seats in the estimation of their brother democrats. They ought to know, moreover that they sat up as late and had as much fur as anybody-and this is all we remember.

The Modest Women. Springfield Republican.

Newspapers think it "extraordinary" that among the thousand men who attended a St. Louis hanging from idle curiosity the other day, there were two women. So it is. Even deprayed women generally set mankind a better example.

The Law's Equality

While it is recognized that, under our institu-s, the will of the majority as expressed at the a must in all cases prevail, it is no less true that rights, privileges, and immunities of majorities the rights, privileges, and immunities of majorities and minorities are and must be measured by the same standard. Recently we were designated by political names and divisions; some of us struggled to uphold the views of one party, and seme of another; but to-day we are all citizens of Mississippi, entitled to equal protection and advantages under her laws, and all alike interested in maintaining her happiness and welfare."

From Georgia letters which we reprinted not long go from the New York Times, we judge it is a fact proven that the cotton mills of Georgia are making rom 12 to 20 per cent annual dividends, and have every prospect of expansion and success before hem. To-day indeed news comes from Augusta hat the Langley cotton factory has declared a semi-innual dividend of $12.50 per share. The net agains for the year were 22 per cent. If that item annual dividend of $12.50 per share. The net carnings for the year were 22 per cent. If that item is true, and we know of no reason to question it, then certainly cotton goods are paying the industrious Georgians, and in spite of Mr. Edward Atkinson's prophecies and Mr. Jenning's belittling, New England will find cotton factors in Georgia that will keep her both busy and anxious. The mills of Columbus made this fact evident even three years upo hree years ago.

A Clergyman's Family Mrs. Muloch Craik, in the Bazar.

"I once met (it was at a garden party) a clergy-man's wife-a graceful, accomplished woman-who introduced her three daughters, all so much after the mother's type that I could not help admiring them. 'Yes,' she said, with a tender pride, 'I think them. Yes, 'she said, with a tender pride, 'I think my girls are nice girls. And so useful, too. We are not rich, and we have nine children. So we told the girls that they would have either to turn out and earn their bread abroad, or stay at home and do the work of the house. They chose the latter. We keep no servant—only a chairwoman to secur and clean. My girls take it by turns to be cook, housemaid, and parlorm id. In the nursery, of course [happy mother who could say 'of course', they are all and all to their little brothers and sisters.' But how about education?' I asked. 'Oh, the work being divided among so many, we find time for lessons, too. Some we can afford to pay for, and then the elder teach the younger ones. 'Where there's a will there's a way.' My girls are not ignoramuses, or recluses either.''

The Prevailing Typhold.

New York World.

The germs of typhoid fever are contained in impure water, and not in the form of miasmatic atmosphere. This being true, our attention must be directed to the water we are now using. There is hardly a spring or well in all this country, at this time, but what must be, owing to the peculiar circumstances, very impure, if not actually poisouous, Just think a moment. You remember the universal drought of last summer? During this dry, heated term, our fountains were almost dried up, and the subterranean acqueducts, or earth yeins. and the subterranean acqueducts, or earth veins were not supplied with water by which the ever ac cumulating poison from decaying vegetables could be carried off, as usual, in small and harmles quantities. Last fall, this poison in large quantities was left on the surface of the earth, and now, durwas left on the surface of the earth, and now, during the continuous and heavy rainfalls, it is carried directly into our wells, and flows from our springs. Water poison, you see, is our theoretical cause for this fever. And now, to prevent this dread disease, our water, for both drinking and bathing purposes, should be either boiled or well filtered through charcoal.

O. Wilde has been invited to Concord by Miss Alcott, who met him at D. G. Croly's in New York last week. He will visit Massachusetts in February. The Concord set will be pained by the innocent and uninformed remark of the Boston Transcript as follows, last evening: "We doubt if any of our well known lion-trappers would be pleased to find this hero of ridicule in their nets, or if they would show the regular attendance to their menageries on the occasion of his exhibition." The Transcript furher fecilitates itself that Bost in is no such place and has now a fine chance to show its "superio ity" to the ganius of D'Oyley Clate for "imputently advertismes" his young man. The same journal prints a note from a victim at New York who says Wilde the over stacks of littless of introduction. The Majority Rule in the Jury Room.

Providence Journal.

The Massachusetts legislature has before it a bill, which is the result of a feeling of considerable strength in the community and among jurists, that justice should not be defeated by the want of absolute unanimity in a jury. How large a proportion of the jury should be required to give a verdict is not fived by the bill, and it is necessived that there of the jury should be required to give a verdict is not fixed by the bill, and it is presumed that there will be a long and careful discussion of its practical bearings, even if the principle is admitted at all. But it is felt by many that the opportunities which are now given to the prisoner to prove his innocence, and the additional safeguards in the law against injustice, might be fairly offset by some provision against fraud or obstinacy in the jury box, if one can be devised that is equitable and practicable. It will not be easy, however, to fix a limit, and the advocates of the change may be told that the better way for a reform would be to give a better choice in the selection of the jury, rather than in removing the necessity of its unanimity. That there is room for improvement will probably not be denied by anybody who thinks of the many notable instances of the defeat of justice through fraud or ignorant obstinacy in the jury box.

The Cotton Receipts.

The Cotton Receipts. New Orleans Times-Democrat.

There has been a serious falling off in the cotton receipts at this port during the past week—so serious, indeed, that we cannot regard it as altogethe ous, indeed, that we cannot regard it as altogether a true indication upon which to base crop estimates. We have always considered the present crop a short one, taking our special reports, in which we have every confidence, as a sandard i but we doubt if the deficiency will be as great as the falling off in receipts would seem to imply. The weather throughout the Mississippi valley has, for several days past, been simply hideous. It has rained almost incessantly. The plantations are converted into mud holes, every little slough and coule is swollen into a torrent. Travel is impossible, hauling out of the question, every description of business is at a standstill. We can understand that there is no cotton on the banks waiting for the boats, and that great carriers which a month ago numbered their cargoes by the thousands of bales, should now come to the wharves with a beggarly account of hundreds. We venture the prediction that a week of dry, cool weather will change the appearance of things very material back.

Gladstone and the Prince. London World.

Gladstone and the Prince.

London World.

Mr. Gladstone's reference at the Guildhall last week to the prince of Wales, and his completion of his 40th year, was the soic felicious and picturesque touch in a speech that was in other respects a masterpiece of the art of saying nothing. The very fact that the prime minister is not a professional courtier lends to the compliments which he publicly bestows on royalty a special grace. There was, too, more than a conventional appropriateness in Mr. Gladstone's remarks on the birth of the heir apparent forty years ago. The prince of Wales, whatever may be his political opinions, has never failed to pay Mr. Gladstone, both as the prime minister and as the real, if not titular, leader of the opposition, the courtesy due to the mosillustrious Englishman, and one of the greatest national forces of the day. Mr. Gladstone has uniformly acknowledged that this has been so, and among the documentary heirlooms of Hawarden there is probably none more prized than a letter from the-prince of Wales, written four years since, and thanking then the preacher of the anti-Turkish crusade for his condolences on the death of the Princess Alice—a letter couched, as all who have seen it will testify, in the most graceful and the most touching language. His toyal highness, it is no secret, protested with some warmth against the oitsisor of Mr. Gladstone's name from the list of guests invited to the wedding of the Duke of Connaugh. The syveretin had no sooner reluctantly charged Mr. Gladstone, in April, 1889, with the task of forming an administration, than the Prince of Wales, who had only just arrived in London, cafled in Harley sireet and congratulated the statesman who was manifestly the people's choice. A few days afterwards he invited all the members of the cabinetand several other oficers of the government, to a dinner at Marboro' house. The significance of the step was not lost on the public, and it was accepted as one of the many signs, consistently shown by the prince, that he is imbu will hear no warms but those parties presently you will hear no names but those revered by the people—the sons of illustrious presidents. It will simplify these quadrennial contests very much. It has been so in all nations. It must be so in this. Only one president before Lincoln had a son worthy to succeed him, and he was elected as well as his father. The reason why young Washingtons, Jeffersons and Jacksons were not made presidents was because they never were born. Our nation is young. We have had time to grow no illustrious families. There is something in blood—in a name. Just think of how a worthy son of Andrew Jackson, now venerably with years and in the maturity of his powers and fame, would run in 1884. Just so would kincoln run in 1881, young Grant in 1892, young Garfield in 1900, young Hayes in 1908. Seneral Garfield in one of his great speeches said it was well that great men in this country left no sons to inherit their fame. That was true then. It is true no longer. Already we speeches said it was well that great men in this country left no sons to inherit their fame. That was true then. It is true no longer. Already we have four royal families in due time destined to resume the presidency if they have with the names also inherited the abilities and virtues of their illustrious fathers. Nothing so captivates the popular imagination; nothing so attracts votes, either, as a great name. The veneration in which the father is held is transmitted to the son, and ever since 1855 the country has been anytics; to see the nce 1865 the country has been anxious oble son of Abraham Lincoln honored w

ENGAGED.

I've sat at her feet by the hour, In the properly worshipful way;
I've carried her many a flower;
I've read to her many a day;
Social battles with friend and with lover

For her sake I often have waged And now from her lips I discover That she—ch! she is engaged. One season we led in the German; And one we were partners at whist On Sundays we heard the same serm. The opera never once missed,

The opera hever once missed, we were generally winners of tennis, Our skill at the target was gauged; but a difference between now and then is, For now she—for now she's engaged.

I have carried a parasol o'er her.
When we strolled in the deep shaded grove;
Whole minutes I've dallied before her.
Assisting to button her glove;
As she sprang to the saddle my fingers.
Her wee foot a moment have caged,
And the thrill in my pulses still lingers,
Though now she—now she's engaged.

Does she ever live over, I wonder,
The night that we sat in the cove.
One shawi wrapped about us, while thunder
And windsterms and hail raged above?
How, trembling, she hid her white face on My shoulder, and how I assauged
Her fears by the story of Jason—
Does she think of all that when engaged?

On my walls kaug her many me mentoes; That cathedral she sketched me in Rome It was after my camp life she sent those Silk slippers to welcome me home; twastier my owncome me home;
filk silpers to welcome me at college,
're the letter she wrote me at college,
In a book all sorted and paged—
How delightful to read with the knowledge
That now she—yes, now she's engaged!

I am going to call there to-morrow,
In her joy she will gree; her old friend
Without even a shadow of sorrow
That the friendship has come to an end;
And close in my arms I will fold her,
No matter for papa enraged,
Shall his wiath from me longer withhold her
When to me—'tis to me she's engaged?

Some Pleasant Reminiscences of the Celebrated So-prano-Her Voice When a Child and in Maturity-Its Marvel us Beauty-Her Triumphs in Europe.

Adelina Patti in Atlanta! The announce ment is full of interest for those who love music. No one with the slightest pretense to knowledge of the world's affairs, is ignorant of the triumphs of an artiste, who is pre-eminently "La Diva." Her career has been one of brilliant conquest almost from the moment of her debut upon the concert stage many years ago. To-day she is at the zenith of her reputation as an artiste, and Patti comes back to her native land in the plentitude of her power as a singer. Adelina Patti from a child had "the divine endowment," says a lady, who knew her in Baltimore, "when she was but eight years old. She was a child of music, song and genius. Adelina had an elk-like look, with her dark complexion, lustrous black eyes, shaded by long lashes, a wealth of beautiful black hair, which she always wore hanging in two long braids, and regular, symmetrical features. She was extremely grace ful and unconscious in all her movements and even at that early day displayed a mar velous amount of naive and pleasing coquetry that made it easy for those who foresaw her future dramatic career to prophesy her rare adaptation for light and fascinating roles sim ilar to those in which she has since becom famous. We found that we had a very pe culiar playmate. She had little taste for childish sports, and looked scornfully upon dolls, regarding all of our favorite games with perfect apathy. She soon revolutionized the character of our play, substituting for our usual games pantomimes or improvised operas. Even at this age her voice was a marvel. It was most wonderfully clear in the higher notes, especially high staccato, which she sang with marvelous purity and ease. She always kept the most perfect time, and it was said that she was never known to utter a false note, while her voice was phenomenally high. But as wonderful musical genius as she evinced, I think that he dramatic promise was even more rare and miraculous. It is true that her musical education was never a matter of systematic tech nical training, but had been unconsciously imbibed from the very awakening of her child ish ideas. Never did a queen of song step into the inheritance of her kingdom with more perfect right than Adelina Patti."

Thus it will be seen that from her earliest years Patti was destined to fame. Her debut in New York was made November 21, 1859, and in the next month she appeared in opera enacting the roles of Amia, Lucia, Rosina and Martha. Hardly had her fame become established in her native land when she sailed in the spring of 1860 for Europe, and she has not since visited the land of the free. It can hardly be denied that Adelina Patti inks to day as the greatest of sopranos.

Her triumphs, won in almost every land in Europe, attest her popularity; and she may fairly be said to command her own terms from the impressarii of the old world. In view of the undoubted fact that most bril liant operatic engagements were prof-fered Patti for the present season—by ac-cepting which she would have no further responsibility than the duty of singing on certain nights, with company and accesso-ries all arranged by others—it is impossible not to credit La Diva's declaration that she came back to America largely to give the peo-ple of her native land the opportunity of hearing her when her voice was in its best condition, and her artistic fame most firmly established. There is no occasion to dwell at established. There is no occasion to dwell a length upon the unfortunate fiasco which marked her management during her first American concerts in New York. The parties to whom she entrusted the business arrange-ments of her season had no knowledge of means and methods in America, and consequently his excellent intentions all went for naught. Indeed but for a fortunate event, on which the diva, her management and the public are alike to be congratulated, Patti's American season would assuredly have proved a failure. Like a sensible woman the great artiste recognized the need of "a new de-parture," and one pleasant day accepted Mr. Henry E. Abbey's generous offer, and ar-ranged affairs that the remaining thirty concerts of her American tour should be unde the direction of the manager, who had di-rected with such success the American tour

In an interview with Mr. John C. Fryer yes terday that gentleman said: "Mr. Abbey entered into negotiations for Patti last summer, but she refused to consider them at that time, having decided to make the tour of America

'You think the tour will be a complete Yes, indeed. It is true that, by the terms of the contract. Patti is to receive an immense ount of money. But then it must be re-nbered that Adelina Patti stands at the head of her profession, and America never fails to recognize grand talent. Nilsson and Lucca gained magnificent triumphs here, and Mr. Fryer is very sanguine of the triumphs of an artiste who is conceded to be a greater at traction than either of those. As regards the price of tickets for Adelina Patti's concert appearances under Mr. Abbey's management, worth while to note that all the seasons of Nils-and Lucca, $4 was the price for the best seats. The schedule determined upon is cer-tainly as moderate as could possibly be arranged, considering the expense which he is obliged to incur. It provides that the general admission shall be $2, with reserved seats at $3 in addition. The concerts that Mr. Abbey is to give will be infinitely more interesting and attractive than those in which Patti has thus far appeared in this country.

"The accessories, I suppose, will have all due attention—there will be an orchestra, to add to the effect of the diva's singing etc., to add to the effect of the diva's singing "Yes, sir. A large orchestra will accompany Madame Patti, and in addition to Signature." nor Nicolini, the eminent tenor, and other members of the Patti concert troupe, as originally organized, a contralto of high re-pute is engaged, so that the ensemble of the entertainments will be thoroughly fine. You can readily understand that, with these attractions, we can only visit the larger cities of ere is assurance of popular appreciation and support for, his great

Indianapolis Journal.

Senator Logan's educational bill proposes to set aside the annual revenue from the whisky tax as a national fund for the support of free schools. As this tax amounts to about $60,000,000 annually, it will be seen that this proposition is a gigantic one, and in proportion to the magnitude of the subject of national education. The bill will receive thorough consideration by congress and the country, and in all its details will be fully debated. Its details have not yet been published, but will be examined generally with great interest. In a recent article on "Southern Illiteracy," in the Journal, some statistics were given as to the illiteracy of southern states as compared with northern and new states. It was evident from the figures that no pairty or penny-wise policy would now suffice to diminish the wast danger which threatens the republic from illiteracy. Senator Logan's bill has the merit of approaching the subject in the manner its greatness demands. If this wast sum is distributed to the states in proportion to their illiteracy, the southern states will get the greater portion of it. They need it. It is the nation's business to see that the million and a half of yoters in the south that cannot read their own ballots do not increase, as hey certainly will unless the government deals with the subject in some such manner as General with the subject in some such manner as General Logan proposes. With $60,000,000 per annum set aside as a national fund the partion would soon be able to offer to every child the privileges of a free school

AMUSEMENTS.

MISS ANNIE PIXLEY.—This pretty and charming little actress must have felt flattered at the very large and fashionable audience which greeted her at DeGive's opera house last night. Miss Pixley is pretter, more charming, and as natural as ever. Bret Harte certainly had this bright little lady in view to bring before the public the fearlessness, the devotion and the frankness of his heroine. She seems to know where to bring in the humor of the combination of girl and woman in the character. There is nothing stagey about Miss Pixley. There is nothing conventional in her singing, but her remarkable voice enables her to vocalize to the same fresh and natural effect. The play being of the California period, has some little of the sensational, but the success of M Liss, is due to its complete and charming personification, by as bright and popular a little actress as is now on the road. Miss Pixley is very effectively supported. She can always rely upon full houses in our city.

VOKES FAMILY.-This popular and bright fami apported by a comedy company of much excel-ence, will begin an engagement at DeGive's opera-couse to-night. It is their first visit south, and they are playing to large houses everywhere, giving great satisfaction. They will play their comical extravaganza, "The Bells of the Kitchen," preceded by a laughable comedy. "The Belles of the Kitchen" is an admirable olla podrida of music, burlesque dancing and acting. The ladies are pretty, graceful, and talented, and the gentlemen tunny and swart. All are good vingers and unity. Inny and smart. All are good singers and unex elled dancers. Their programme is chaste, devoid any objectionable feature, full of fun and highly story bloom.

Frank Mayo.—The Detroit Evening News, speak ing of Mr. Mayo's performance of Virginius, says "Frank Mayo and his splendid company were seer at their best last evening in Virginius. It was a magnificent all-round performance, and the only wonder is now that stars like Lawrence Barrett Edwin Booth and John McCullough have dared to Edwin Booth and John McCullough have dared to come here so many times with sticks and supers to support them. Mr. Mayo is the first tragedian to give these grand old tragedies, as they should long ago have been produced, with competent people and accessories. Taking the rank and file into consideration, one must acknowledge that no tragedian was ever better supported in the history of the local stage. The performance of Virginius last night was almost a revelation. Mr. Mayo's Virginius rose at times to the height of grandeur."

Cunningham et al. vs. Schley et al. Equity, from Richmond. Equity. Retraxit. Judgments. Contracts.

Speer, J.—I. A retraxit is the open, public and voluntary renunciation by the plaintiff in open court of his suit or cause of action, and if this is done by the plaintiff and a judgment entered thereon by the defendant, the plaintiff's right of action is forever gone.

2. When a party to a contract seeks to encountry to the same by bill for specific performance, and obtains a decree thereon, the contract is merged into the decree. Such contract and the decree founded upon it will not be set aside at the instance of the party who took it, from Richmond. Equity. Retraxit. Judg

aside at the instance of the party who took it on the ground that the defendants refuse to fully comply with it, and that on acc insolvency they cannot be compelled by execution to do so, as provided in the decree Especially will such decree stand in the ab sence of any allegation of fraud, accident or mistake, or that insolvency had occurred since the making of the decree

(a). A consent decree is not the subject of a still of review. Judgment reversed. Foster & Lamar, for plaintiffs, in error. W. W. Montgomery, for defendants.

Hunt vs. Hardwick & Co. Complaint, from Whitfield. Evidence. Fraud Partnership

Contracts.

Speer, J.—1. In ascertaining the valu of a stock of goods in a store at a given time, it is admissible to show what was its value a short time previous thereto. 2. The question being whether one partner was induced to pay a certain price for the interest of his copartner by false representations of the latter, if the seller made suc statements solely on information derived from a clerk of both of them, and the purchaser knew that such was the case, the falseness of such statements would not avoid the trade if the seller correctly reported them as re

3. The verdict is not contrary to law, evi dence or the charge of the court.

(a). If a party to a contract seeks to avoid it on the ground of fraud or mistake, he must upon the discovery of the facts at once an nounce his purpose and adhere to it. If he remains silent, keeps the property received under the contract as his own, and recognizes t by making payments thereon without con plaint long after discovery of the fraud, he will be held to have waived his objection, and will be bound as though no fraud had occurred.

Judgment affirmed. W. C. Glenn; Johnson & McCamy, for plaintiff in error. I. E. Shumate, for defendant.

Gilreath & Son vs. Holston Salt and Plaste Co. Assumpsit, from Bartow. Bankrupt cy. Bailments.

J.—1. Where goods were consign to be sold on commission, the consignee where ceived and sold them, but failed to pay over he proceeds, created a debt while acting in iduciary character, from which he was no eleased by obtaining a discharge in bank

2. A request to charge not founded on the vidence is properly refused. Judgment affirmed.

Simon vs. Myers & Marcus. Complaint, from Richmond. Practice in Superior Court. Pleadings. Set-off. Continuance. Notice. Jackson, C. J.—1. Where the names of counsel are marked on the docket for a defendant, it has been the practice of the superior courts to enter the case as answered on the call of the appearance docket. When there is no such call, the marking of the names of counsel alone at the first term is sufficient, and the general issue will be considered as filed.

plaintiff of the filing of a plea of set-off is ne-cessary. When filed it must substantially set forth the claim of the defendant, so as to be itself notice thereof.

(a.) If the plaintiff be taken by surprise by the filing of the plea of set-off, or has had no notice of it, he will be granted a continuance, and costs or proper terms imposed on the defendant. 3. After the filing of a plea of set-off, the eat such plea.

4. Under a plea of set-off the plaintiff can not defeat the recovery of the defendant by failing or refusing entirely to prove his own claim. The defendant may neverthless prove his demand and recover against the plaintff. 5. That a defendant has previously sued the plaintiff in the present suit, and that suit is pending at the time of the bringing of this. will not prevent defendant from dismissing such action and then pleading his demand as set-off to the action of the plaintiff. Judgment affirmed. Frank H Miller, for plaintiff in error. J. S. & W. T. Davidson, for defendants.

s prima facie evidence for him on a rule or settlement. It is the judgment of the or dinary thereon, that makes them such evidence, and that must appear by an exemplification from the records of the court of ordinary.

2. An administrator who makes his returns s provided by law, is entitled to commis-ions; if he fails to make returns, and upon entation fails to show satisfactory cause for lelay, he is not entitled to commissions for the year of the default.

3. Where a new guardian was appointed for i minor in 1869, and after the lapse of nine months and fifteen days brought a rule for settlement against the former guardian, if the proceedings showed on their face that it was n the nature of an action of devastavit for acts of mismanagement prior to June 1, 1865, as to such acts the bar of the statute would

Such a bill not demurrable for want of equity.

2. A bill is not multifarious because all of the defendants are not interested in all of the matters contained in the suit. It is sufficient if each party has an interest in some matter in the suit which is common to all, and that they are connected with the others.

3. All persons who are directly or consequentially interested in the event of the suit are properly made parties to a bill in equity. as to prevent a multiplicity of suits by or gainst parties at once or successively affected y the original case.

4. An allegation that stock was purloined or stolen, as complainant believed, by a cer-tain person, and afterwards used by him withut her knowledge or consent, was equivalent o a charge of want of authority on the part of such person to represent complainant.

5. A bill being brought to recover stock fraudulently sold to several purchasers, the omplainant could amend by striking the names of several of them, waiving her right to call on them to respond to her for the amount of stock held by them.

6. There was no error in ordering the person who fraudulently sold the stock to be made a party to the bill for its recovery.

Williams vs State. Bastardy, from McDuffie

Criminal Law. Jurisdiction.

Speer, J.—The gist of the offense of ba tardy is the refusal of the putative father to give bond for the support of the child. A prosecution for bastardy is a species of proective measure to prevent counties becoming chargeable with pauper bastards. Therefore, the county to which the bastard is likely to become chargeable has jurisdiction of a bastardy case, and not the county in which the child was begotten or born.

THE COTTON MARKET

CONSTITUTION OFFICE, Atlanta, January 17, 1882

New York-At the opening this morning future were generall held higher, but throughout the day no important change occurred. During the forenoon a dullness prevailed to some extent, though no decided impression was effected in the course of the market. The speculative feeling was inactive, and transactions were generally on a small reale. For the early months there is something of a quiet upward inclination expressed, and a moderate daily gain will ultimately strengthen the un dertone of the market and improve the general out look. At the close the market ruled steady for future with quotations a fraction higher. The spot market shows no particular change; middling 12c.

Net receipts for three days 43,885 bales, agains 74,410 bales last year; exports 30,667 bales; last year 59,521 bales; stock 1,152,874 bales; last year 909,524

BOUND OVER.—Yesterday Annie Doggett, plored, was before Justice Butt on a charge of larceny. She was required to give bond for her appearance at a higher court to stand a final trial.

The Figures on a Failure.—B. K. Tucker, the Hampton merchant, whose failure was reported in yesterday's Constitution, has assets to the amount of about $4,000, and liabilities to the amount of about $7,000.

A New Assistant.-Mr. Charles Newell post-office inspector, has, by instructions of the chief of the department, reported to In-spector Frey for service in the division which comprises the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

A Correction.—Atlanta, Ga., January 17, 1882.—Editors Constitution: In this morning's issue of your paper, under the head of "Some Failures," it is stated that Brock Bros. owe this bank about $9,000, and that this bank had closed them. This is an entire mistake, Brock Bros. do not owe this bank one dollar.

A Successful Young Man—It is a pleasure to note the success which is attending one of Atlanta's most worthy young men. John M. Miller, whose energy and patient industry give promise of a most successful career for him. He has opened a tasteful stationery store and news depot at 31 Marietta street, where he is conducting an immense business as a news dealer. He sells more than three hundred papers daily, and can supply the publications of all the leading cities.

For Forgery.—Yesterday William Otto, alias Otto Wiffle, was before Justice Rhea charged with forgery. The offense, as shown by the evidence, was that Otto gave Mr. D. N. Hightower a forged order for his board and represented himself as being an employe of Ristine & May. The name of Ristine & May was signed to the note, but when it was presented to them they denied all knowledge of it, and stated that Otto had never been in their it, and stated that Otto had never been in their employ. He was arrested for forgery, and at the investigation yesterday the evidence was so strong against bim that he was committed to fail to await a final trial. to jail to await a final trial.

THEIR STAY IN MACON. - The Telegraph says: Their Stayin Macon.—The Telegraph says: It is absolutely useless to attempt any particularization (gracious, what a word!) of the different artists, or the features, or of the characters found in the performance by the Vokes family last night in their neat, refined musical, nonsensical, anusing, laugh-making smile-raising comedy, absurdity, or whatever it is, which they denominate as "Belles of the Kitchen." If we start with Miss Bessie, we have nothing good enough left for Miss Vichare the Miss and the start with Miss Bessie, we have nothing good enough left for Miss Vic-toria; and then there is Miss Jessie! and Fred!

and Fawdon!

Then, all that we can say is, they played to a splendid house; that they are good—aye, gooder than the goodest, (pray excuse the bad grammar), and deserve the fullest houses wherever they may go.

PAIN KILLER has been in constant use for forty years, and the universal testimony from all parts of the world is, IT NEVER FAILS. It not only effects a permanent cure, but it relieves pain almost instantaneously. Being a purely vegetable remedy, it is safe in the hands of the most inexperienced.

The record of cures by the use of PAIN KILLER would fill volumes. The following extracts from letters received show what those who have tried it think:

G. H. Walworth, Saco, Me., writes:

I experienced immediate relief from pain in the side by the use of your Pain Killer.

E. York Says:

I have used your Pain Killer for rheumatism, and have received great benefit. Edgar Cady, Owatonna, Minn., says:
About a year since my wife became subject to severe suffering from rheumatism. Our resort was to the PAIN KILLER, which speedily relieved her.

Charles Powell writes from the Sailors'

AN INTERESTING CASE. - A decision in an An Interesting Case.—A decision in an interesting case was rendered in the supreme court yesterday. The suit involved the right of Mr. H. Lewis, of this city, to use the word "Snowflake," as applied to the crackers which he manufactures. It will be remembered that there is a manufactory of crackers which turns out "Larrabee's Snowflake crackers," and it is, this concern that made war upon Mr. Lewis and charged him with appropriating its trade mark. Larrabee filed a bill of injunction claiming that the term "snowflake" was his private property. Judge HE WANTED IT ALL.—Yesterday S. R. Beavis, a white man, was before Justice Pitchford on a charge of cheating and swindling. It was claimed by the prosecution that Mary Wilkinson furnished Beavis with $210 with which to purchase an outfit for a boarding house It appeared that the furniture was purchased and the money expended in the settlement of the bills, payment of rent, etc. This was a very satisfactory situation until it developed that Beavis claimed that the property was all his own and seemed to be oblivious of the fact that the money had been supplied by his fair partner in business. Justice Pitchford, after hearing the evidence, decided that the prisoner should be held to answer, and accordingly he was required to give a bond of $500 "Lone Jack Tobacco" could be a trade mark, and yet the words Lone Jack have no connection with tobacco so far as their descriptive power of it is concerned. But the court held that mere descriptive terms describing the quality of appearance of an article-could not be a subject for a trade mark but might be used by any person having an article of a like description and that therefore the term "snowflake" being only an adjective indicating lightness, whiteness and purity could not be a trade mark. So Lewis is entitled to use it.

The Petition of James Swan, Albert E. Thornton, and William W. Austell, and their associates, shows that they desire under the corporate name and style of "The Atlanta Cotton Seed oil Company," to establish a factory in said county with a business office in the city of Atlanta, for the purpose of manufacturing or expressing oil from cotton seed. The capital to be employed and atready paid in, is twenty-five thousand dollars, and they ask the privilege of increasing it when necessary, to any sum not to exceed one hundred thousand dollars.

They, therefore, pray to be incorporated under said county.

MEANS'S HIGH SCHOOL, 76 NORTH FORSYTH street, Atlanta, Ga. Exercises will be resumed January 2d, 1882, and continue 24 weeks. No attempt is made to popularize the school by advancing pupils more rapidly than is consistent with thoroughness. But every student receives individual attention and is promoted according to his acquirements. Our course of instruction is so arranged that the mind may be developed systematically and successfully by mastering those studies first which are simplest and leaving the more abstract and difficult till later. Mathematics, English composition and penmanship receive special attention. French is taught oy a native of France and a graduate of the university of Paris. Much care has been taken to secure the greatest possible proficiency in every branch of instruction. It is our purpose to let nothing that the teacher can do for the good of his pupil go undone. Pupils are prepared for junior class of any college in the state. There is also a special course for young men who wish a business education.

Lectures at Y. M. C. A. Hall.

It is understood that a course of instruction in the current international Sunday school lessons is to be inaugurated next Friday evening, commencing at 8 o'clock, at the Young Men's Christian association hall, by Rev. Dr. Boggs. Doubtless those who attend will be greatly benefitted, and while the course is, we believe, mainly for the benefit of young men, others may avail themselves of the advantages to be derived from this valuable source of instruction. The rooms of the association are centrally located at 49½ Whitehall street, well lighted and comfortable. They are rapidly becoming the resort of those who desire to spend an hour or two in reading during the day. They are open and free to all from eight o'clock a m till half-past nine p m.

Officer Moss last night arrested man who is thought to be Carter, the man who is wanted in Florida for murder, and for whom a thousand dollar reward is offered. The man says his name is Allen and talks rather mixed about himself. He answers the description given of Carter very closely and may be the man.

THE FOUL SCOURGE

What We Have Already Done-An Interview with Cummings, in Which He Seys Some Sensible and Interesting Things— Our Pest House Newly Built.

It is amazing to know of the groundless and utterly untrue reports which are dairly circulated through the city in reference to smallpox. The Constitution's reporters have caught up these rumors and followed them fearlessly and energetically, and not in a single instance have they led to the discovery of a case of small-pox. The public can have no idea of the rapidity with which these rumors fly, nor of the utter lack of foundation for them. It is only to the reporter or health officer, who feels it to be his duty to investigate them fully, that they have become tiresome and devoid of the interest which they at first

To show how these rumors are created out of nothing, it may be stated that a few days ago a Constitution reporter and a health offlcer, while on a wild hunt for a case of smallpox, had pointed out to them a building in which it was positively asserted that the disease existed. The officer and the scribe entered every room in the house, made a thorough search, and not only failed to find a once. thorough search, and not only failed to find a case of the disease, but actually discovered that the entire tamily, with the exception of one small girl who was playing in the yard, had gone visiting.

On the day before yesterday a Constitution TION man heard of a report that there were two cases at the St. Joseph infirmary, and that a red flag had been put out to warn the people of the presence of the disease. The reporter was promptly at the infirmary, but there was for the sale of Mme. Demorest's no flag out, and a thorough investigation Reliable Patterns. showed that not one inmate of the infirmary had anything that had even the slighest ap pearance of small-pox. Dr. Armstrong visited the infirmary and substantiates the above. These instances are mentioned in order to show that from the general public these rumors are scarcely worth a notice, unless corroborated by the statements of those who are in a position to know the facts.

in a position to know the facts.

The city has been awakened to the importance of thorough vaccination and there are now being vaccinated from eight hundred to a thousand persons per week. The colored people are coming up well, and it is but fair to say that if the small-pox were to reach the city we have available lymph enough to withstand any rush. The situation is a very satisfactory one, all things considered.

"Doctor, do you think the small-pox will come here?"

"I think that we will have some cases of it, but as to the extent of its ravages I can make no prediction."
'Where will it make its appearance, do you

"I have not the slightest idea." "Is it more likely to occur in negro neigh borhoods in the worst parts of the city?'

"I will answer your question by telling you something. I had a cousin who lived in Sazannah. He was the father of a beautiful young girl, who was taken with small-pox. The officers went to the house to move her. My cousin met them and told them quietly but firmly that there was one of two things which could be done. That the girl could remain undisturbed, or the officers could come in to take her out, but if they attempted it he would kill them in the threshold of his door, or they would enter over his dead body. He was a quiet citizen and meant every word he said. The neighbors demanded her removal, but she was not removed. She recovered and is now the wife of a well known Georgia lawyer. You see if a case were to make its appearance to-day the people would be aroused and would come forward and Stinging, smarting, irritation of the urinarp pass, aroused and would come forward and be vaccinated. In that way we would get in alead of the small-pox.
